The Publication Religion and Law in the Czech Republic has Received an Award in the Charles University High Quality Monographs Competition

The competition among high quality monographs has taken place at the Charles University in Prague since 2010. Monographs are evaluated annually by two eleven-member expert committees (the Committee for Medical and Natural Sciences and the Committee for Humanities and Social Sciences). Through the evaluation process, the two Committees set standards and difficulty levels for various types of publications; the standards and levels are regarded as crucial in their respective scientific areas.

A book by Professor Jiří Rajmund Tretera and Associate Professor Záboj Horák, Religion and Law in the Czech Republic, published by Wolters Kluwer in Alphen aan den Rijn in the Netherlands, was ranked among 83 selected monographs; its rank was 33–39. The award was granted in appreciation of the work of the authors, as well as of the field of religion law in general, and the teaching of the field of law at universities.

Among the books that received awards were publications by authors from the School of Law of the Charles University (7), the School of Catholic Theology of the Charles University (3), the School of Evangelical Theology of the Charles University (1), and the School of Hussite Theology of the Charles University (1). The names of the authors and the titles of all 83 publications are available at cuni.cz/UK-6826.html.
